The Fairmount College Girls Glee Club will appear in the Congregational Church in this city on Monday Evening, April 6th, under the auspices of the Dorcas Society of the church. No introduction of this celebrated company of entertainers is needed for the people of Great Bend and vicinity. They have given recitals in the city for a number of years and have always met with large audiences and most enthusiastic welcomes, and it is only necessary to tell of their return dates to assure them the same hearty greeting as heretofore. The Club is composed of twenty-four talented and handsome college girls with a vivacity and charm which completely captivates their audiences. The program, while principally of a musical nature, is interspersed with readings and special numbers to suit the taste of all, and if you miss this recital you will be missing one of the treats of the season. Tickets will be on sale in a few days and it would be well to secure your seats early.

Bert Bowman came down from the farm near Larned Saturday for a visit over Sunday with his many old friends here. Bert reports that all of the wheat is looking fine up in that part of the country.

POULTRY

CARING FOR LAYING PULLETS

Dry, Comfortable Houses Should Be Provided and an Abundance of Green is Necessary.

Changes in management of poultry can not be made during the course of the breeding and hatching season without seriously interfering with the results. Any new methods of management, feeding, etc., which one wishes to use, must be inaugurated at the beginning of the season and adhered to throughout.

The bringing of the chickens in from the range upon which they have grown from little chicks, into the laying home, is apt to be a very violent and abrupt transition. An authority upon the raising of poultry profitably, has the following to say on the subject: "It has seemed in studying the birds in the fall of the year that the change from the range to the laying house, was an important one in the life of the bird, and that the results during the subsequent winter with reference to egg production depended much upon the way this transition was made. It seemed advisable both on general grounds and from observation of the birds themselves to make this change as gradual as possible. With this idea in mind the pullets have been brought into the houses from the range much earlier during the past few years than was the custom before—and the results have been excellent. When the pullets are first brought in it is not advisable to shut them up entirely in the houses at once. On the contrary, our work is planned in such a way that there is always a freshly-seeded yard full of green grass for the birds to run in after they are brought into the house until cold weather sets in. The fowls are brought from free range into a condition of restricted range, but with better pasture on the restricted range than on the free range. The yards are freshly seeded and have not been trampled down or burned or dried out by the sun, as is the grass on the open range from which the birds are taken. In this way the attempt is made to have the transition from the range conditions to house conditions as gradual as possible. After about two months of restricted range, the birds are finally shut up in a certain front house for the winter. The feed of all adult birds, whether pullets or not, consists of two essential parts: (a) The whole or cracked grains scattered in the litter, and (b), the mixture of dry ground grains generally known as a dry mash. In addition to the grains and dry mash, oyster shell, dry cracked bone, grit and charcoal are kept in slatted troughs, and are accessible at all times. Plenty of clean water is furnished. About five pounds of clover hay cut into one-half inch lengths is fed dry daily to each 100 birds in winter.

A, Empty Flat; B, Oats Started to Sprout; C, Oats Well Sprouted.

When the wheat, oats, and cracked corn are given, the birds are always ready and anxious for them, and they scratch in the litter for the last kernel before going to the trough where an abundance of feed is in store. The hens like the broken and whole grains better than the mixture of the fine, dry materials. Yet they help themselves to it, a mouthful or two at a time, whenever they seem to need it. There is a general unanimity of opinion among poultrymen that the fowls do best when some form of green or succulent food is given them during the winter months.

In fact, it is an absolute necessity, if best results are to be obtained. The function of green food is largely in the nature of a digestive stimulant.

Green sprouted oats have been widely used in recent years as a green food for poultry and it is a most excellent thing. The oats are fed when they are from four to six inches in height, and are fed at the rate of a piece of the matted oats and attached green stalks about six by eight inches square for each 100 birds per day.

Care of Farm Flocks.
"Better care of farm flocks and their products" is the battle cry of those who have learned the financial possibilities of well-kept flocks. The farm flock is no longer a "convenience;" it must show profit.

Reducing Profits.
The more poor layers and extra males there are in the flock the less profit there will be.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.
